President argues economy is strong enough to justify the reduction in food assistance.

The Trump administration said on Wednesday it will make it harder for states to keep residents in the U.S. food stamp program in a move that is projected to end benefits for nearly 700,000 people.

President Donald Trump has argued that many Americans receiving food stamps through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, known as SNAP, do not need it given the strong economy and low unemployment. The program provides free food to 36 million Americans.

The administration has now finalized a rule that tightens guidelines on when and where states can waive limits on how long certain residents can receive benefits. The changes will move more "able-bodied" adults into the workplace, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue said.

"States are seeking waivers for wide swaths of their population, and millions of people who could work are continuing to receive SNAP benefits," he told reporters.

The United States generally limits the amount of time that adults ages 18-49, who do not have

The U.S. unemployment rate was 3.6% in October.

"We need everyone who can work to work," Perdue said.

But critics say the moves will hurt poor Americans.

"This is an unacceptable escalation of the administration's war on working families, and it comes during a time when too many are forced to stretch already-thin budgets to make ends meet," said U.S. Representative Marcia Fudge, an Ohio Democrat.

The administration has sought to tighten requirements for food stamps without congressional approval after Congress blocked a Trump-backed effort to pass new restrictions through the Farm Bill last year.

The latest rule will take effect next year and save the U.S. government $5.5 billion over five years by removing about 688,000 people from food stamps, said Brandon Lipps, a USDA deputy undersecretary.

"For those impacted it will mean less nutritious meals, or meals that are skipped altogether," said Cassie Ramos, policy associate for the Center for Science in the Public Interest, an advocacy group. REUTERS

Elon Musk says 'pedo guy' tweet was 'off the cuff'

2 Elon Musk, wrapping up testimony at his defamation trial on Wednesday, insisted his "pedo guy" Twitter message at the heart of the case was an "off-the-cuff" insult hurriedly written in anger. After leading a successful rescue of 12 boys and their soccer coach from a flooded cave in Thailand in July 2018, the plaintiff, Vernon Unsworth, in a CNN interview mocked Musk's offer of a minisubmersible as a public relations stunt, and said Musk could "stick his submarine where it hurts." Musk testified he took to Twitter two days later to lash back at Unsworth because he found Unsworth's comments "extremely rude and contemptuous." "This was very much an off-the-cuff response," Musk said, and "absolutely not" an insinuation of the crime of pedophilia.

Canada's Trudeau plays down spat with Trump

3 Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau on Wednesday played down a video of him discussing U.S. President Donald Trump with other world leaders, saying that he had been surprised but happy with events at a bilateral meeting earlier in the day. Trump called Trudeau "two-faced" after a video surfaced of Trudeau talking with the leaders of Britain, France and the Netherlands about Trump's team's jaws dropping "to the floor" during an impromptu news conference with the two leaders. "We had a great meeting yesterday between me and the president... Last night I made a reference to the fact there was an unscheduled press conference before my meeting with president Trump, I was happy to take part in it but it was certainly notable," Trudeau said.

Four Rikers officers suspended after inmate reportedly tried to hang himself

The inmate is currently in a medically-induced coma.

Officials are investigating new claims that correction officers allowed an inmate to attempt to take his own life at Rikers Island.

ABC reports that three guards and a captain have been suspended after the allegations.

The incident took place last Thursday, according to CBS.

It was reported that an 18-year old, identified as Nicholas Feliciano, tried to hang himself with a piece of clothing, and the guards allegedly watched him for seven minutes before intervening, according to The New York Times.

It was reported that Feliciano was arrested on Nov. 19 on a parole violation.

The 18-year old survived the attempt and is currently in a medically induced coma. The New York Times reports the 18-year old was put into the coma on Tuesday. Sources told outlets that Feliciano was on a respirator with no brain activity.

The New York Times also reported that Feliciano had a history of mental health issues and suicide attempts.

ABC says that before the attempt, it was reported that the inmate got into a fight at the jail, and was moved out of the general population the day he attempted to take his life.

DOC Commissioner Cynthia Brann released the following statement about the incident:

"The claims being made here are extremely troubling and we are taking them seriously. The safety and well-being of those in our custody is our number one priority and an investigation into this incident is underway. Three officers and one captain have already been suspended and if the outcome of the investigation warrants, we will take appropriate disciplinary action up to and including termination. We have referred this case to the city's Department of Investigation, which is conducting an independent inquiry."

News of this incident comes after Mayor de Blasio shared news earlier this week that the land use process has been started to officially prohibit the incarceration of individuals in Rikers after Dec. 31, 2026.

They are seeking to change the Rikers Island designation on the official city map to a public place.

promise to close Rikers once and for all. Though mass incarceration may not have started here, we'll do all we can to make sure it ends here."

As part of the roadmap to closing Rikers, it was reported that the Eric M. Taylor Center (EMTC) on Rikers Island will close in March. Additionally, the Brooklyn Detention Complex (BKDC) in Boerum Hill will close by the end of January.

"We're making good on our promise to close Rikers once and for all. Though mass incarceration may not have started here, we'll do all we can to make sure it ends here."

Mayor de Blasio

Mayor de Blasio said in a statement earlier this week, "By guaranteeing that Rikers will never again be used for incarceration, we're charting a new course forward for the island and the people of New York City."

He added, "We're making good on our

Legal experts summoned by Democrats call Trump actions impeachable

Trump called the report a “joke” at the NATO meeting in London.

President Donald Trump’s actions to prod Ukraine to pursue investigations that could benefit him politically represent impeachable offenses, constitutional law experts called by Democrats testified to the U.S. Congress on Wednesday as lawmakers laid the groundwork for formal charges against Trump.

At a House of Representatives Judiciary Committee hearing featuring political theatrics, three law professors chosen by the Democrats made clear that they believed Trump’s actions constituted impeachable offenses including abuse of power, bribery, obstruction of Congress and obstruction of justice.

A law professor selected by Trump’s fellow Republicans disagreed, saying the Democratic-led impeachment inquiry was “slipshod” and “rushed” and lacked testimony from people with direct knowledge of the relevant events, adding that current evidence does not show Trump committed “a clear criminal act.”

With Trump headed toward possible impeachment in the Democratic-controlled House within weeks, Republican lawmakers repeatedly tried to interrupt the hearing by raising objections and points of order. One of the three professors called by the Democrats told the committee’s top Republican, Doug Collins, she felt insulted by remarks he made.

The impeachment inquiry, launched in September, focuses on Trump’s request on Ukraine to conduct investigations that could harm Democratic political rival Joe Biden. Collins said the impeachment drive – or as he called it a “railroad job” – was motivated by then would hold a trial on whether to remove Trump from office.

Trump has denied wrongdoing.

In London for a NATO meeting, Trump called a report by House Democrats released on Tuesday that laid out possible grounds for impeachment a “joke” and appeared to question the patriotism of the Democrats, asking, “Do they in fact love our country?”

The focus of the inquiry is a July 25 telephone call in which Trump asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky

“If we cannot impeach a president who abuses his office for personal advantage, we no longer live in a democracy. We live in a monarchy or we live under a dictatorship.”

Noah Feldman, Harvard University law professor the deep-seated hatred Democrats feel toward Trump since he won the 2016 election.

The hearing was the committee’s first to examine whether Trump’s actions qualify as “high crimes and misdemeanors” punishable by impeachment under the U.S. Constitution. The panel would draft any articles of impeachment – formal charges – against Trump. If the House approves such charges, the Senate to open an investigation into Biden and his son Hunter Biden and into a discredited theory promoted by Trump’s allies that Ukraine, not Russia, meddled in the 2016 U.S. election.

Hunter Biden had joined the board of Ukrainian energy company Burisma while his father was U.S. vice president. Trump has accused the Bidens of corruption without offering evidence. They have denied wrongdoing. REUTERS

Kim Jong Un rides again as North Korea warns U.S. against using military force

A series of unspecified threats have been issued.

North Korea said it would take “prompt corresponding actions” if the United States resorts to military force, state media reported on Wednesday, as tensions rise ahead of Pyongyang’s year-end deadline for stalled denuclearization talks.

The statement came just hours after North Korea announced it would convene a rare gathering of top ruling-party officials later this month, and state media showed photos of leader Kim Jong Un taking a second symbolic horse ride on the country’s sacred Mt. Paektu.

U.S. President Donald Trump, in Britain for a NATO summit, said on Tuesday that Washington could use military force against North Korea “if we have to,” though he added he still hoped for talks.

Kim was “displeased to hear” those comments, Pak Jong Chon, chief of the General Staff of the Korean People’s Army, said in a statement carried by North Korea’s state news agency KCNA.

“I clearly state here that if the U.S. uses any armed forces against the DPRK, we will also take prompt corresponding actions at any level,” Pak said, using the initials of North Korea’s official name, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.

“The use of armed forces against the DPRK will be a horrible thing for the U.S.”

North Korea and the United States are still technically at war and the state of truce could turn into an “all-out armed conflict any moment” even by accident, Pak said.

For the second time in two months, Kim visited Mt Paektu on horseback, this time accompanied by senior military officers, aimed at instilling the mountain’s “indefatigable revolutionary spirit” in the people, KCNA reported.

Kim has warned the United States it has until the end of the year to offer more concessions or North Korea will pursue an unspecified “new path.” Analysts say that may include a resumption of intercontinental ballistic missile launches or nuclear tests.

Washington has urged North Korea to give up significant portions of its nuclear arsenal before punishing international sanctions are eased, while Pyongyang has accused the United States of “gangster-like” demands for unilateral disarmament.

U.S. officials have called for more talks, while playing down the deadline as “artificial” and warning that it would be a “huge mistake and a missed opportunity” for North Korea to take any provocative steps.

But North Korean state media have carried a steady chorus of statements in recent weeks, saying Washington should not ignore the warning and dismissing U.S. calls for talks as a stalling tactic.

The 15-member United Nations Security Council met behind closed doors on Wednesday over missile launches conducted by North Korea last week. Following the meeting, the council’s five European members condemned Pyongyang’s “provocative actions.”

While Kim’s plans are still unclear, the signals suggest the window for diplomacy is closing fast, if it is not already shut, said John Delury of Seoul’s Yonsei University. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

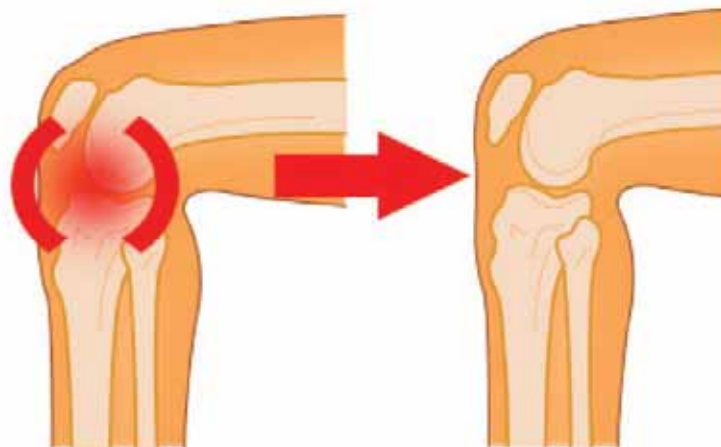

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Trader Joe's pulls numerous items due to Listeria concerns

Some impacted items include sushi, salad, poke bowls and more.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Salads, ready-to-eat sushi and other items are being recalled because they might contain Listeria monocytogenes.

Trader Joe's shared a statement on Tuesday, which read, "In relation to the Fuji Foods Recall, we have been alerted by our supplier that the following refrigerated products – sold only in our AL, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, IA, IL, IN, KS, KY, MA, MD, ME, MI, MN, MO, NC, NE, NH, NJ, NY, OH, PA, RI, SC, TN, VA, VT & WI stores – may have the potential to be contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes."

It was reported by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that Fuji Food Products Inc. announced its voluntary recall last Wednesday. Outlets said that the issues were initially discovered in Brockton, Massachusetts, during a routine inspection performed by the FDA.

Fuji Food Products CEO Farrell Hirsch said in a statement, "As responsible processors of safe, fresh food for nearly 30 years, we are addressing this problem vigorously

Below are the dishes and SKU numbers of items possibly impacting by Listeria:

• California rolls	34899
• Classic California Rolls with Brown Rice and Avocado	90982
• Spicy California Rolls	34896
• Tempura Shrimp Crunch Rolls	51328
• Tofu Spring Rolls	92151
• Shrimp Spring Rolls	90879
• Smoked Salmon Philly Roll	60377
• Smoked Salmon Poke Bowl	60375
• Banh Mi Inspired Noodle Bowl	61471
• Queso Fundido Spicy Cheese Dip	64657

and we apologize to those who are affected by it."

Hirsch added, "We will restart operations only after we have eliminated the cause, and the FDA certifies that our facility is once again free of possible contamination."

As of Dec. 3, no illnesses have been reported, and all affected products have been pulled from the shelves.

If you purchased any of these items with the specific codes shown above, please do not eat them.

Trader Joe's wants you to return the product for a full refund or throw out the item.

For questions, comments or concerns, Trader Joe's encourages you to call their Customer Relations number (626-599-3817). The phone number can be reached Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Pacific time. You can also fill out an online form at traderjoes.com.

For more information on the recall, go to fda.gov.

NYPD reveals sketch of man wanted for anti-gay hammer attack

The NYPD needs your help finding a suspect who allegedly attacked a man with a hammer after yelling anti-gay slurs. NYPD's Hate Crimes Task Force is investigating and released a sketch of the suspect earlier this week.

The NYPD Crime Stoppers page tweeted: "WANTED for an Assault in the confines of the 46th Precinct/Transit District 11 on the N/B train platform at the Tremont Street Station on 11/11/19 @ 1 AM Reward up to $2500 Seen him? Know who he is? Call 1-800-577-TIPS or DM us! Calls are CONFIDENTIAL! #YourCityYourCall" male who was waiting for the N/B train in the Bronx at the Tremont Street station.

The victim is a 21-year-old

The incident took place on Nov. 11, and NBC reported that the suspect tried to hit the victim with a hammer and missed. The suspect and the victim struggled more, and eventually, the suspect threw the victim on the train tracks.

There were plenty of witnesses who alerted MTA employees of the situation. The MTA was able to stop the arriving train before it was too late. It was also reported that the MTA helped pull the victim back safely.

The victim was transferred to Saint Barnabas Hospital, where he is recovering from a laceration and contusion to his head.

If you or anyone you know has any information about the incident, you are encouraged to call the NYPD Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74782). You can also send in a tip via Twitter or go to Crimestoppers.com.

Could life insurance go up in smoke for some vapers?

Global reinsurers are stepping up their warnings to life insurer clients about the potential risks of vaping, putting pressure on underwriters to charge certain vapers higher rates than smokers, or even exclude them altogether.

U.S. authorities said last month that there had been 47 deaths this year from a lung illness tied to vaping. The health concerns about vaping have grown despite evidence showing e-cigarettes help smokers to quit, and has led to bans in some countries including India and Brazil.

Reinsurers insure the insurers, and often have large research arms which help their clients by modeling risk. They give broad advice to insurers, rather than specific policy or pricing recommendations, but can potentially refuse to provide reinsurance or can raise premiums if their guidance is ignored.

Most insurers have long treated smokers and vapers the same, meaning they can pay close to double the premiums of non-smokers or non-vapers. But three major reinsurers have provided updated advice on vaping in the past three months, with new warnings, while others are considering their approach.

The new warnings focus on young vapers and the vaping of liquids containing marijuana ingredient THC, which is legal and prevalent in some U.S. states and has been linked to lung illnesses in the country.

The shift in the reinsurance and insurance sector represents a further blow to the vaping industry, which markets its products as healthier alternatives to smoking.

Hannover RE, which already advised life insurers to treat vapers like smokers, has asked them to be particularly cautious about insuring people aged under 25 following the "epidemic" of lung injuries in the United States, said Nico van Zyl, the reinsurer's U.S. medical director.

The question of whether to offer coverage to this higher risk group should be a consideration for life insurers, he said.

French reinsurer SCOR said in a paper on Oct. 24 that e-cigarettes contain nicotine which may have toxic effects, including on brain development in teenagers and young adults.

SCOR recommends life insurers treat vaping like smoking, and exclude individuals who use vaping products considered by U.S. authorities likely to cause lung issues – namely, those containing THC (tetrahydrocannabinol).

Swiss Re also treats vapers like smokers. In addition, Global Chief Medical Officer John Schoonbee said the reinsurer has told insurers in recent months to make extra checks on whether vapers are using cannabis products.

"Getting insurance is really expensive for people who have taken steps to quit tobacco."

Simon Manthorpe, CEO of British vaping product manufacturer Vapemate

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has urged people not to use e-cigarettes containing THC, some of which contain vitamin E acetate, a "chemical of concern" among people with the vaping-associated lung injury EVALI.

Stephen Cooley, Chief Medical Underwriter at PartnerRe Life & Health, said more research on the long-term effects of vaping was needed and that life insurance rates for vapers would be the same as smoker rates "at best."

Munich Re and Gen Re said they were monitoring the recent developments in EVALI.

Proponents of vaping as a tool to stop smoking say the insurers' and reinsurers' approach is harsh.

"Getting insurance is really expensive for people who have taken steps to quit tobacco," said

Simon Manthorpe, CEO of British vaping product manufacturer Vapemate.

Vaping in Britain and elsewhere in Europe is more heavily regulated than in the United States. And Public Health England says vaping is at least 95% safer than smoking.

Loews Regency Hotel is offering a delicious treat for the holiday season.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

In the ice-cold weather, a piping hot cup of delectably soothing hot chocolate is just what the doctor ordered. At the Loews Regency Hotel next to Central Park in New York City, guests will get to indulge in the seasonal favorite treat in a deliciously unique way this year with its new Holiday Cocoa and Cocktails promotion featuring a variety of libations for both kids and adults.

"New York City is a magical place over the holidays and there is no better way to celebrate the season than with a warm drink at The Regency Bar & Grill after a day of museum hopping on Museum Mile, shopping on Madison Avenue or at our Bloomingdale's holiday pop up in our Lobby," said John Maibach, Managing Director, Loews Regency New York Hotel in a release.

One delightful cocktail from Loews Regency, "Miracle on 61st Street," incorporates Grey Goose vanilla vodka, walnut liqueur, hot cocoa and is topped with whipped cream, a chocolate drizzle topper and an edible gold leaf. The kid's version incorporates all of the delicious flavors listed above minus the more spirited ingredients. "Miracle on 61st Street" is now available at The Regency Bar & Grill for $24 until New Year's Day. According to the release, as a bonus, the kid-friendly cocoa will also be offered complimentary with the purchase of "spiked" cocoa for adults.

According to the release, headquartered in New York City, Loews Hotels & Co is rooted in deep heritage and excellence in service. The hospitality company encompasses branded independent Loews Hotels, and a solid mix of partner-brand hotels. The Holiday Cocoa and Cocktails is just another way that the hotel is able to offer a special treat for all New Yorkers during this magical time of year.

Actress Julie Hagerty on cutting the tension with comic relief in 'Marriage Story'

WILSON WEBB

Noah Baumbach's newest film hits Netflix this weekend. PAT KING

In most films about divorce, there is a tendency to create clear sides for the audience to root for. One person has to be cast as the villain who has done something so reprehensible to the other person that there is no disputing that they should be at fault in the dissolution of their marriage. But what happens when people simply split up for the reason that they are just are no longer compatible with each other? This realistic depiction of a couple falling out of love is what anchors Noah Baumbach's latest film, "Marriage Story," starring Adam Driver and Scarlett Johansson. The film has been playing in select theaters over the past month but will make its way to Netflix this Friday.

The film follows Driver and Johansson's characters -- Charlie and Nicole -- who have been married for several years and share a child together named Henry, played by Azhy Robertson. Charlie and Nicole both run an experimental theater company in New York where Charlie writes and directs and Nicole stars. Things start to fall apart in their marriage for a number of reasons, and Nicole decides to leave New York for Los Angeles to take her chances getting cast in a network pilot. She moves back home with her actress mother Sandra, played by the hilarious Julie Hagerty, in order to lay down roots back in her hometown and assembles her legal team against Charlie.

Hagerty, the comedic treasure from the classic "Airplane!" films, provides some of the film's biggest laughs as Sandra tries to offer a safe haven for her daughter while trying to maintain a great relationship with her old son-in-law and her grandson. When I spoke with Hagerty over the phone, she tells me of how Baumbach's keen eye to detail and realistic approach to dealing with the dissolution of a family drew her to the script.

"You just can't be with somebody for years, even if it's a son-in-law and you've got children. I think with any separation of people who have relationships there is a trickle down effect of how it affects everyone," explains Hagerty. "Every time I see this film, there are little nuances and it's such a testament to how great a director he is that you don't even notice because it's so natural a behavior."

Baumbach's writing and direction really make you familiar with the eccentricities of not only Charlie and Nicole, but all of the supporting characters that populate their world. Whether it's Nicole's hard-ass divorce lawyer Nora Julie Hagerty.

GETTY IMAGES

WILSON WEBB

WILSON WEBB

Fanshaw, played by the force of nature that is Laura Dern, Charlie's sympathetic lawyer Bert Spitz, played by Alan Alda, or the actors that make up Charlie's New York theater group, each character is given their own identifiable attributes that add color to the story.

"His writing is so gorgeous and clear. For each character, no matter the size of the part, everyone has a very definitive personality that he has written," Hagerty adds. "From soup to nuts, there is such clarity and honesty that he gets out of each actor."

With such an incredible cast, Hagerty's performance truly shines as the most outright example of comic relief in the film as Sandra's quirks help to cut the tension of the main conflict taking place.

"I loved playing her and I loved working with Adam, Merritt [Wever, who plays Nicole's sister, Cassie], and Scarlett," says Hagerty. "They are such great actors and only make you better. I loved playing that part. She's a mother who loves her kids and loves her grandbaby. She's a showbiz mom. I had a great time playing her."

TRAVEL

Hoarding travel rewards is a bad strategy. Here's why

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Is there anything better than saving money? Well, sure, there are hundreds of better things, including warm socks fresh from the dryer. But it still feels great to stow some cash for the future.

Many travelers treat their credit card points and frequent flyer miles like cash, trying to save as many as possible and spend them sparingly. Some even brag about their Scrooge McDuck-like vaults filled with millions of miles and points.

Unfortunately, points don't work like other investments — and saving instead of spending them is almost always a terrible financial decision.

If you're a compulsive saver with an enormous stash of points, I'm sorry to tell you that your otherwise good habits are getting in your way. And if you're a terrible saver who doesn't know what a 401(k) is, congrats! You're accidentally on your way to travel hacking success.

Imagine a terrible investment, then make it worse

Any financial expert will tell you it's not smart to save too much money in the form of cash. Stuffing your life savings under the mattress exposes it to inflation; a dollar bill saved today is worth less than a dollar tomorrow.

Points and miles undergo a similar process called devaluation. Almost without exception, they become less valuable with time. But in reality, devaluation is even worse than inflation.

While inflation is controlled by enormous macroeconomic forces, devaluation is governed by the very companies that issued those points and miles in the first place. For example, American Airlines miles might be worth a cent for domestic flights today, but tomorrow the company could decide to reduce that value by 50%.

Sound crazy or far-fetched? Airlines have already been doing it over the past decade. Many have moved to "dynamic pricing" where they can literally adjust the value of their miles however they want, whenever they want — and they don't even need to tell anyone they've done so.

In fact, travel rewards programs have a perverse incentive to lower the value of the points they use to lure you into their programs (though it's not as kinky as it sounds). It works like this: These companies are incentivized to both give away as many miles as possible to attract customers and lower the value of those miles as much as possible to avoid losing money.

If that weren't bad enough, many points and miles expire within a few years of being earned. Imagine if cash expired after a couple years — how much would you really try to save?

Fie on FOMO

Why do so many people hoard their points and miles despite these risks? Unfortunately, travel rewards writers like me are largely to blame. Whoops.

Many travel rewards articles focus on how to "maximize" and "get the most value" from your points, describing the palm-strewn utopias you could frolic amidst if you just did your research. This raises the bar too high and makes many travelers hold onto their points in search of the perfect redemption.

But for most travelers (including us rewards experts), the best award redemption is simply the one you actually make.

Imagine reading an article titled, "The 10 Best Ways to Get the Most Value From Your Money." Obviously, that's absurd. The "best way" to use money always depends on the needs of the owner — ditto points and miles.

Don't let the fear of "maximizing" get in the way of spending your travel rewards. Do enough research to make sure you're not getting screwed and making terrible redemptions, but don't worry about those palm-strewn utopias if your personal best use for points is flying home to Hartford.

Make points-hoarding a dirty word

We all cringe at TV shows about hoarders who fill their apartments with cat food and old newspapers, but holding onto fast-depreciating points and miles doesn't carry the same stigma. It should.

OK, fine, it's not quite as gross — but it's still bad personal finance. Travel points are made to be spent, so don't feel guilty for booking your next trip (wherever it takes you).

Feeling overwhelmed about how to use your points and miles? I'm here to help. In this column, I answer your questions about the baffling world of travel rewards, cutting through the jargon to provide clear answers to real problems. Send your questions to skemmis@nerdwallet.com.

Eli Manning is likely to start on Monday night against the Eagles after getting benched in Week 2. GETTY IMAGES

Jones hurt, Eli to start Monday night

The franchise legend gets another chance to lead the Giants' offense.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

It looks like Eli Manning is going to get another opportunity to lead the Giants.

Rookie quarterback Daniel Jones has a high ankle sprain and is in a walking boot, making his status for Monday night's matchup with the Philadelphia Eagles doubtful.

Giants head coach Pat Shurmur admitted that it is "very likely" that Manning will get the start.

Shurmur likened Jones' injury to that of running back Saquon Barkley's, but to a lesser extent. Barkley's injury held him out for four weeks, though it was initially believed that he would miss between six and eight.

There has not been a definite timetable for Jones' return as of yet, but expect the Giants to practice extreme caution to ensure their future franchise quarterback is not put at risk amidst a lost season.

The Giants are now the worst team in the NFC following a 31-13 loss to the Green Bay Packers that dropped them to 2-10 on the season.

Manning has not appeared in a game since Week 2, which was believed to be his last-ever start with the organization.

The 38-year old continued to struggle behind the Giants' lackluster offensive line, completing 62.9 percent of his passes for 556 yards, two touchdowns and two interceptions before getting benched.

It was an unceremonious ending to a 16-year reign as the Giants' starting quarterback as Shurmur and general manager Dave Gettleman opted to hand the keys over to Jones, who was selected sixth overall back in April.

Now Manning will return to a Giants offense that is returning to health. Tight end Evan Engram (foot) and wide receiver Golden Tate (concussion) are expected to play on Monday night in Philadelphia. It would be the first time this season that all of the Giants' playmakers are healthy and on the field at the same time.

Now, it's Manning's gain rather than Jones'.

The two-time Super Bowl champion and MVP will be greeted by a familiar and harsh opponent. Manning has been owned by the Eagles for most of his career, posting a 10-20 record in 30 career games against Philadelphia with 52 touchdowns and 34 interceptions.

The Eagles have nosedived this season, hitting a new low in Week 13 with an embarrassing upset loss to the Miami Dolphins. It dropped their record to 5-7 as they can't find a way to catch the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC (I)East.

That won't matter much to Giants fans, who are likely more concerned with securing the No. 2 pick in the draft this spring rather than winning a few meaningless games at the end of another disappointing campaign.

However, it could set up a four-game send-off for arguably the greatest quarterback in franchise history before he rides off into the sunset.

Wilpon family in talks to sell Mets to Steve Cohen

The billionaire hedge fund manager could take control of up to 80 percent of the team.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The days of Fred and Jeff Wilpon as the major owners of the New York Mets look to be numbered.

Sterling Partners — which is headed by the current Mets' owners — released a statement on Wednesday afternoon revealing that they are in negotiations with the franchise's minority owner, Steve Cohen, to increase his investment in the club.

According to Bloomberg, Cohen could purchase up to 80 percent of the organization, which would value the team at

$2.6 billion.

That same report states that Fred Wilpon is "making the move as part of estate and philanthropic planning."

"As part of the agreement, Fred Wilpon will remain in the role of the Control Person and CEO for five years and Jeff Wilpon will remain in his role as Chief Operating Officer for the 5 year period as well," the statement from Sterling read.

That suggests the Wilpons could be out by as soon as 2025.

Cohen, 63, is a hedge fund manager who founded Point72 Asset Management and is currently valued at $9.2 billion. He bought a four percent stake in the Mets in 2012 and grew up a fan of the team in Great Neck.

The very next year, he pled guilty to insider trading and agreed to pay $1.8 billion in fines.

The Wilpon family and Sterling Equities have been the majority owner of the Mets since 2002 but have yet to deliver the franchise its first World Series title since 1986.

Their rule has been headlined by an inability to spend big money on top players over the years, which is fallout from their loss of millions due to their involvement in the Bernie Madoff Ponzi scheme in 2008.

A new owner could bring about a change in philosophy for the Mets, who have been run like a small-market team despite playing in the largest sports market in the world. They were also valued by Forbes earlier this year as the sixth-most expensive MLB franchise.

Big-time money could result in big-time players and New York's National League team finally meeting high expectations placed on them by a starving fan base.

Phillies sign ex-Met Wheeler

The New York Mets have seen another person of interest depart for a different corner of the National League East.

After passing up on Joe Girardi for their managerial vacancy, the Mets saw their former righty Zack Wheeler sign with the Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday, as first reported by Marc Carig.

NBC Sports Philadelphia's Jim Salisburys reports that the deal is worth just under $120 million over five seasons. Wheeler going to Philadelphia hit a fever pitch earlier in the day when Buster Olney reported that the Phillies were considered the top bidder for the free agent while the Cincinnati Reds and Minnesota Twins circled.

Wheeler, 29, has strung together two consecutive almost-healthy seasons following a convoluted and difficult road back to the majors after undergoing Tommy John surgery in 2015.

He has started 60

GETTY IMAGES

games since the start of 2018, going 23-15 with a 3.65 ERA and a 1.194 WHIP.

The righty showed a glimpse of becoming a top-tier starter during the second half of the 2018 season when he was one of the most dominant pitchers in the National League.

In his final 15 starts two seasons ago, he went 10-1 with a 2.06 ERA.

He had a similar big finish in 2019, too, which only helped his value on the free agent market. He starting the season 7-6 with a 4.91 ERA, but went 4-2 with a 2.66 ERA in his final 11 starts.

Possessing an arm that should be fresh for a starter entering his age 30 season — he's pitched 791.2 innings since 2013 — was another reason why his price tag was so high.

The Mets initially offered Wheeler a $17.8 million qualifying offer earlier this offseason, which was declined. They didn't display much gumption in an attempt to re-sign him after that.

It will leave them searching for a fifth starter to join Jacob deGrom, Noah Syndergaard, Marcus Stroman and Steven Matz. They could attempt to make a splash in the free agent market by going after a big name like Madison Bumgarner or they'll take the more familiar, conservative route and promote from within. That would mean bringing either Robert Gsellman or Seth Lugo back into the starting fold after extensive bullpen work.

As for the Phillies, the acquisition of Wheeler provides that top-three rotational help the organization has so desperately needed over the past few seasons.

Aaron Nola has received little support from Vince Velasquez, Zach Eflin and Nick Pivetta while Jake Arrieta has been hampered by injuries and inconsistencies.

Adding Wheeler with Nola — who did regress in 2019 after finishing third in the NL Cy Young Award voting two years ago — and a healthy Arrieta gives the top of the Phillies' rotation a considerable boost.
